Talent Series Index

Finding the Right Talent It's a people business, so the logical place to start a long series on the new world of investment work is with a book about finding and evaluating talent. (The Research Puzzle, 7/14/22.)

Valuing Otherness in Investment Organizations Are there opportunities to take advantage of the biases of others in the talent selection process by better understanding issues of gender, race, and disability? (The Research Puzzle, 7/20/22.)

Communicating in the Virtual World What are the advantages and disadvantages of remote versus in-person communication? The answers to that question are important for designing organizations (and for advancing one's career). (Learning Curve, 7/27/22.)

The Art of Interviewing The outcome of due diligence encounters depends on the quality of the questions that are asked and the conduct of the interviews. Some recommendations in that regard close out this series. (Due Diligence, 7/29/22.)

This series was inspired by Talent by Tyler Cowen and Daniel Gross.
